

THE DEGEN'S GUIDE TO THE ORTHOVERSE

What is the Orthoverse?

An NFT project where every single Ethereum address has a token (so there are record beating 1.4 quindecillion of them), but only 10,000 can be ERC1155 compliant.

Abundance and scarcity at the same time.

What do Orthoverse tokens look like?

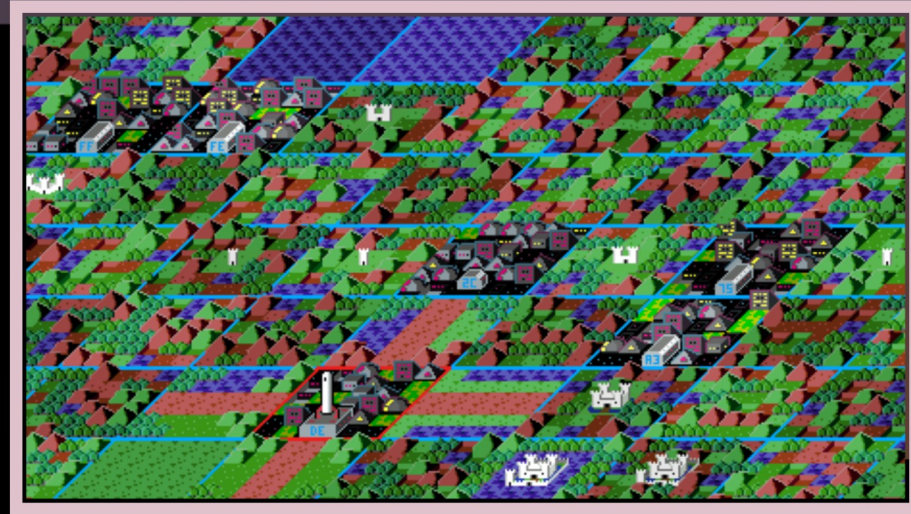

Something like the image on the left.

Or the image on the right if you level your token up to 6.

Because Orthoverse tokens have on-chain levels (up to 7).

What do levels do?

1. They add larger and larger castles to your token image
2. Higher level tokens receive a unique coat of arms
3. They may also get a more central position on the Orthoverse map (check out the next slide)

What's this map stuff?

Tokens get co-ordinates on the map in waves.

The first wave of 1250 tokens have theirs already.

Once a token has co-ordinates (that aren't 999), they're fixed forever.

How the token co-ordinates are allocated is complicated – so check out the following article if you're interested.

What is “flipping”?

Flipping switches your token from a fantasy state to a futuristic one, and back. You can flip your token as many times as you like.

How much does this all cost?

To get a token: nothing (you already own one)

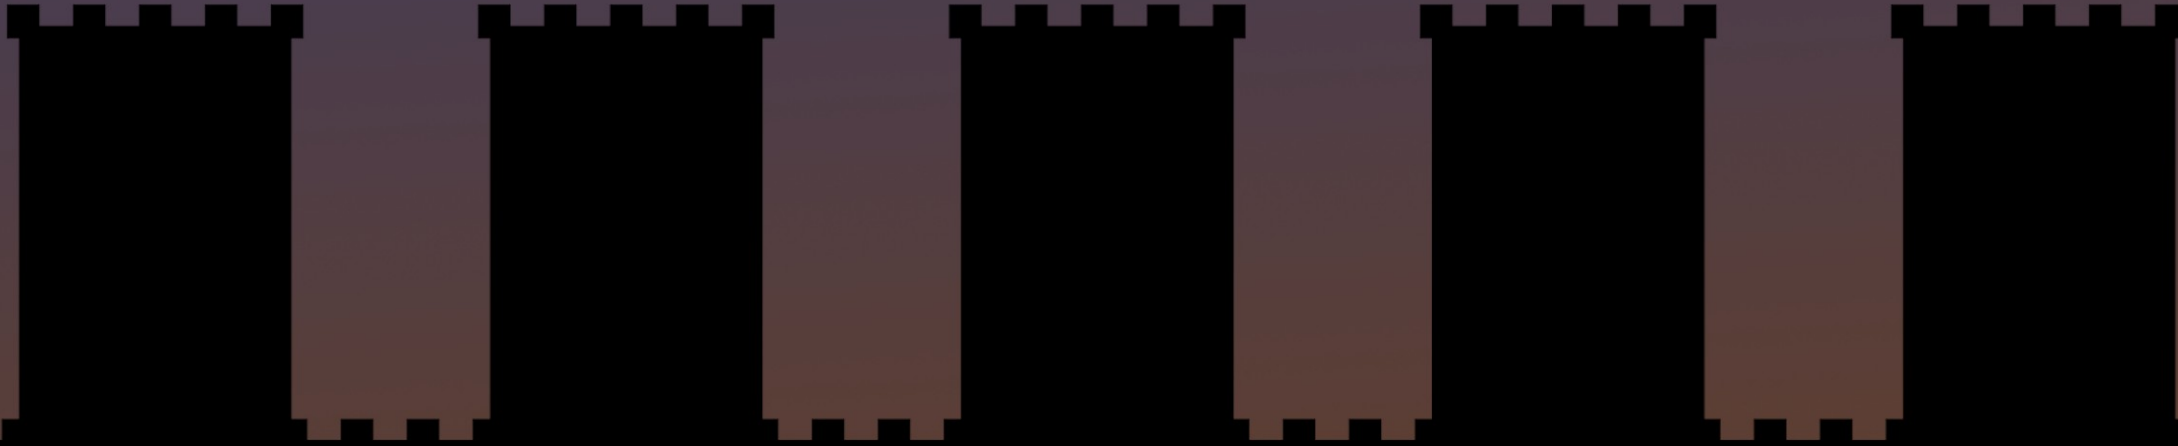

To reveal it: 0.0004 ETH + gas

To flip it: 0.001 ETH + gas

*To level up: 0.008 ETH + gas for first level
then double for each subsequent level*

Why reveal my token if I already own it?

Although every Ethereum address has a token that can be viewed or transferred, through revealing it becomes fully ERC1155 compliant.

It can then be seen and traded on NFT marketplaces like OpenSea.

And only 10,000 tokens can be revealed...

Long term timeline

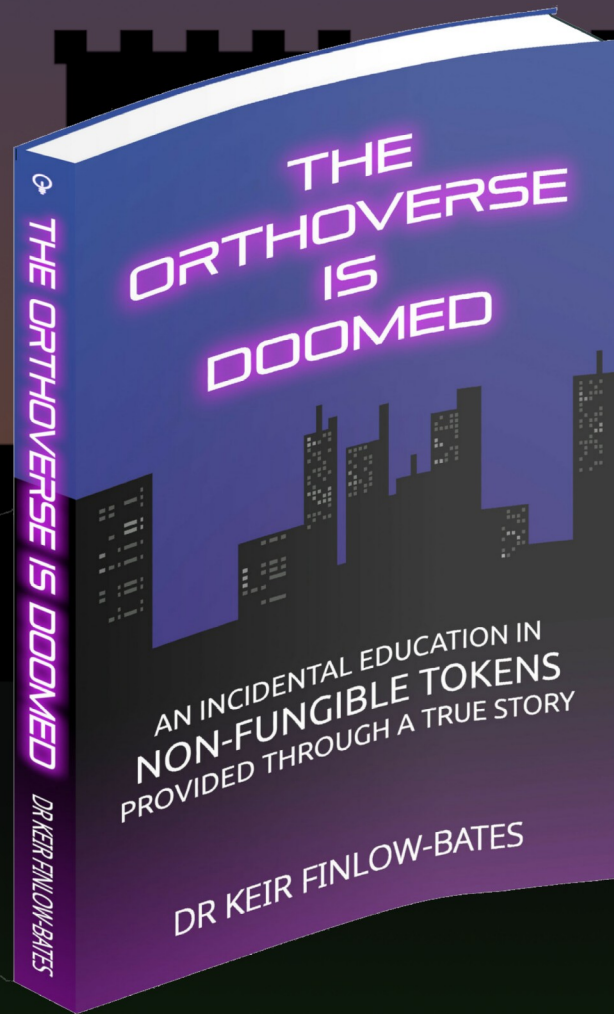

We don't do long term timelines.

Rest assured, interesting and surprising things will keep happening in the Orthoverse.

After all – look at what has been achieved in three months.
